There are 3 possible ways:

Agreement between ccTLD manager and ICANN

1. The Accountability Framework – similar to existing AFs with addition of IDN specific commitments

3. The Bare Minimum Tick Boxes – when the ccTLD manager lodges documents to apply for IDN ccTLD they will need to tick a series of boxes confirming IDN specific commitments

Questions:

What will be the IDN specific commitments?

Will the lowest level of agreement (the tick boxes) be mandatory?

OK, we've got all that now.
But you said ICANN expects to be paid in 2 ways didn't you?

Indeed I did.

All the logistical stuff that is necessary to allow ICANN to open for delegation requests soon after the Board approves, including:

- Online request system - updates to the draft online request form and merge of this with the back-end ticketing system (including notifications, reporting and status definitions).
- Linguistic Processes - finalisation of the revision-3 draft linguistic processes, both for external and internal usage.
- Formation of DNS Stability Panel - finalise contract with party and the material for panellists.
- Test/pre-evaluation of entire system.
- Legal review of needed disclaimers and general legal review of written material.
- Doubtless heaps of other stuff as well but ask Tina!!

OK – that all looks really simple and nothing can possibly go wrong between here and Seoul. Can it?

Alright – I was being REALLY REALLY optimistic in that last slide – there are many things that could slow us down so.....

WHAT CAN I AS THE ccTLD MANAGER of Japan, China, Taiwan, Malaysia,
Korea, Iran, Saudi Arabia, India,
Sri Lanka, Hong Kong....
(fill in your territory)
DO TO HELP??????

Ask ICANN questions. Individually.

Talk to your governments especially about the GAC and possible GAC interference on MINOR issues.

Get really clear whether you can or cannot live with what is being expected of you and say so!
